Facts about Feral Cats

- More than 70% of all U.S. cats entering animal shelters are killed. In fact, being killed at animal shelters and pounds is the number one documented cause of death for cats in this country.
- Virtually 100% of feral cats who enter animal shelters are killed because they are not socialized to people and cannot be adopted.
- The average life span of a feral cat brought to a shelter is just 3 days.
- Feral cats living in managed colonies can be just as healthy as pet cats—with equally low rates of disease and the same average life spans.

Trap-Neuter-Return: A Humane and Effective Way to Help Feral Cats

What is a feral cat? Feral cats are regular domestic cats, just like pet cats. The main difference is that feral cats are not socialized to humans and make the outdoors their home. Feral cats are either born outside to feral mothers, or are previously owned cats who, over time, became fearful or wary of humans after being lost or discarded. Feral cats may bond to members of their colony as well as to their outdoor home territory.

Why not take them to a shelter or call animal control? Since feral cats are fearful of humans, they are not able to be adopted like socialized cats. That means they are almost always killed when they are taken to a shelter.

What is the alternative? AWA urges people to consider Trap-Neuter-Return (TNR).

What is TNR? Through TNR, feral cats are spayed/neutered, vaccinated (including rabies), ear tipped, and returned to their outdoor home. TNR benefits the community by humanely stabilizing the cat population (no more kittens!) and eliminating common unpleasant behaviors associated with mating. The cats in managed TNR programs get to live out their full lives with regular food, shelter and veterinary care, provided by their dedicated caregivers.

AWA’s Pet Clinic Supports Feral Caregivers in Several Ways:

- Renting traps - AWA has traps available for a $100 cash deposit. The deposit is returned when the trap is returned.
- Pet Clinic Services - For just $35, we will provide, spay/neuter surgery, vaccinations (including rabies) and ear tip for identification. We recommend scheduling surgery a week in advance due to the high volume of surgeries. Call our Pet Clinic at 856-424-2288.
- Workshops - AWA offers free TNR workshops every third Thursday of the month in our Pet Clinic between 6pm-7pm. Call 856-424-2288 ext. 105 for more information.
